

What we do... and will always do

Every day, our specialist staff are there to make sure young people with cancer and their families and friends, don't face cancer alone. It's what we do. And it's what we'll always do.

We're there to make sure that care and support is always designed specifically for young people.

We're there to make sure that the seven young people diagnosed every day, and their families, understand what's going on.

We're there to make sure that cancer doesn't stop young people from being young people.

We're there to help young people prepare for the future once cancer treatment has ended.

And we're there to help young people recognise the signs of cancer and be confident about seeking help if they're worried.

Working in our 28 Teenage Cancer Trust units, in hospitals nationwide, in young people's homes and at events, our staff are there to make sure that young people and their families and friends always have someone to turn to. To make that happen, we rely on the generosity of people right across the UK...
